

Abstract

Computer-aided method for parallel calculation of the operating point of electrical circuits

AR
The invention relates to a computer-aided method for parallel calculation of the operating point of electrical circuits, in which the circuit is partitioned into a number of partitions in a first step, in which the charging method is used for the parallel calculation of the individual partitions.

The single figure is the main drawing.

2022ED-62650001